Shingley College is looking for a Digital Transformation Manager to work with our Head of Teaching and Learning Innovation - Luke Terry, to inspire and help revolutionise our approach to how we work and learn. At Shingley, the professional development of all colleagues is a high priority - with protected time to come together as a team, to work independently or across the college - provided by SLT to all colleagues. We call this our Professional Learning Network (PLN).

You'll join Luke's PLN delivery team to nurture our digital and pedagogical skills, identifying opportunities for development, and building the tools and skills that strip away administrative burden, inefficiency and help each colleague fulfil their core function, creating more time for them to spend on the important things. You will need to root your decision making in strong-evidence based practice, and use your robust fundamental knowledge of pedagogy as your currency to build relationships with academic colleagues. You will be first and foremost, a great, highly-skilled teacher that understands the science of learning, how to apply it and how to teach it to teachers. You will understand that 'digital' is the tool, and not the lesson. We welcome disruption, and radical thinking, delivered within our culture of respect, empathy and integrity.

Whether you're coaching an academic team, developing an app or streamlining a business process, your enthusiasm for innovation will inspire your colleagues to step out of their comfort zones and be courageous in trying something new. So if you've spent the majority of your career as an inspirational Teacher Educator and digital pioneer, this is your platform to lead a college-wide revolution as part of the Professional Learning Network delivery team.

To ensure that the underpinning principles from which you build your approach are firmly rooted in the science of learning.

DUTIES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

Delivery of the Professional Learning Network (PLN)

Delivering digital skills training within the PLN, ensuring a high-quality, hands-on learning experience that meets the specific needs of academic and support colleagues.

Design and coordinate a structured schedule of learning opportunities within the PLN that caters to diverse needs, from foundational teaching, learning and assessment skills, foundational digital skills, through to advanced pedagogical innovation.

Monitor and report on the engagement and impact of the PLN, ensuring that protected development time translates into measurable improvements in student success and organisational efficiency.

Driving Digital Fluency and Academic Competence

Lead the operational rollout of core teaching competencies across all academic departments, ensuring technology is used to support evidence-based practices such as cognitive load theory and retrieval practice. Not all colleagues (such as ECTs) may be ready for enhanced digital practice, so your role will be to help them develop some fundamental teaching skills, preparing them to move on to their digital learning pathway.

Move more experienced, confident academic colleagues from basic digital literacy to digital fluency—enabling them to choose and apply the right tools for specific pedagogical reasons.

Provide direct coaching and mentoring, delivering digital "surgeries", PLN activities, and developmental feedback to foster a culture of continuous, evidence-based improvement among academic and support colleagues. Helping your team of direct reports (Ed-Tech Colleagues) to promote the college's vision for technology-enhanced learning, and supporting their development and professional practice.

Cross-College Efficiency and Collaborative Learning

Work proactively across academic departments and business/support functions to identify, create, and implement digital tools that drive organisational efficiency and reduce administrative burden.

Facilitate collaborative learning by connecting academic teams with support staff to streamline workflows and enhance the overall student journey.

Take an operational lead in developing digital competencies within business support functions, ensuring a consistent, high-tech approach to all college operations.

Strategic Alignment and Innovation

Support the Head of Teaching, Learning and Innovation in aligning digital development with the college's Teaching and Learning Strategy and the Professional Learning Network Colleague Development Strategy.

Oversee the piloting of emerging EdTech trends, ensuring they are integrated effectively and ethically into academic life.

Champion a "one college" approach to professional development, breaking down departmental silos through shared digital platforms and collaborative networks.
